Inhaltsangabe: Von Ein Kunde Desired by two men...Serena Walsh had fled from the Mormon wagon train - and from the clutches of the fanatic Elder Greer. She had been saved on the desolate prairie by the handsome cynical Ward Dunbar who wanted her body. Now Serena was Dunbar's unwilling mistress - and his prisoner. Now she was despised by Dunbar's beautiful partner, Perlie, for stealing her man. Now she was desired by Nathan Benedict, the millionaire who wanted her love at any price. And still she was pursued by the Elder Greer. Serena stood alone against the primitive passions of a hostile town that threatened to destroy her.

Kurzbeschreibung She was the golden lady every man desired...including a killer. Serena flees the Mormon wagon train led by fanatical Elder Greer, but nearly dies alone on the prairie. It's Nathan Benedict who finds her and takes her aboard his private railroad car bound for the Cripple Creek gold camp. She is drawn to the handsome gambler--though he expects more from her for his rescue than mere gratitude. Installed at Nathan's gaming house, Serena quickly becomes the toast of the boom town, celebrated far and wide for her golden-heeled slippers. Life is cheap in the high-country gold camp, however, especially the lives of women generous with their favors; no one seems to notice when "parlor girls" begin to die one by one. Will the town and Nathan stand beside Serena when she confronts this menace? A National Bestseller (Please note, this novel was first published in 1980 when forced seduction in romance was not the hot-button issue it is today. If these types of scenes offend you, please consider another of Jennifer's books in the Love and Adventure Collection instead.) From Library Journal This is a combination of historical romance and Western. The plot finds heroine Serena Walsh fleeing from a wagon train and then rescued by saloon owner Ward Dunbar. She soon catches the eye of another man, however, and raises the ire of Dunbar's female partner. A crowd pleaser for fans of the genre.
